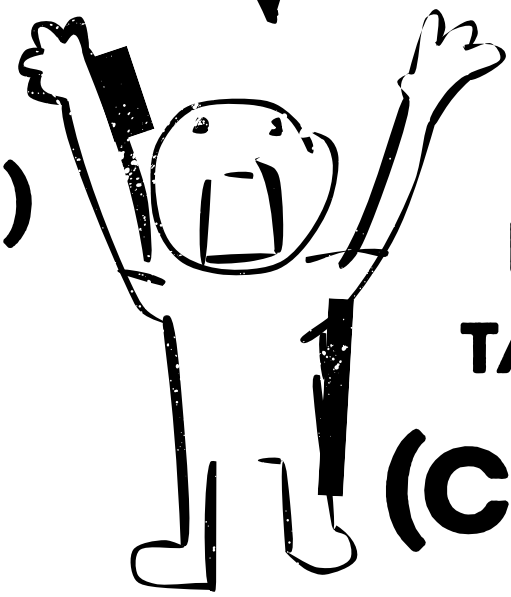
I WANNA CALL MY REPS!

(COULD BE YOU!)



(CARES ENOUGH TO TAKE ACTION)

(CHAD)

Here's my two cents --- if you care enough about a problem to bitch about it, you care enough to bitch about it to a government worker. It's not 'hip' to lay down and take crap. Hate data centers? Hate gerrymandering? Hate the border or new laws the administation's trying to pass? Call and complain! If you're looking for your representative in congress, use https://wrm.capitol.texas.gov/home.

MORE ON THAT...

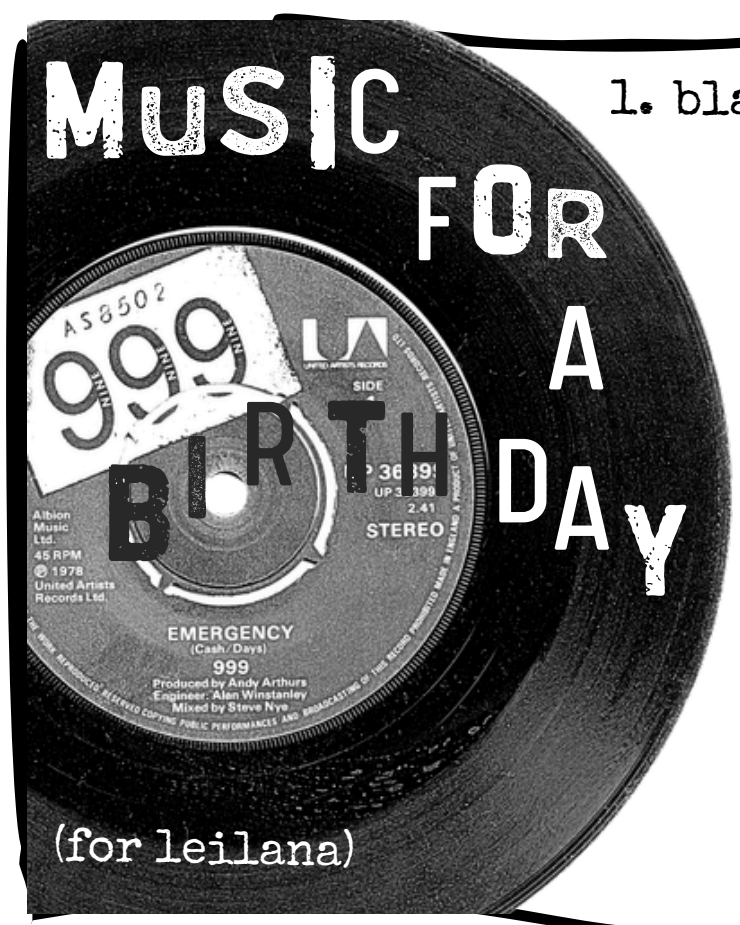
You have a few representatives in government - the big three are your senator, your state rep., and your congressperson. Call your senator and your congressperson for federal issues, like nation-wide legislation, and call your state rep. for more local things like budget and education policy.

Be civil and short. Make specific demands --- urge them against one bill they're voting on, or a change in state policy, etc.

If you're not sure what to say, there's dozens of informational websites for what to say and who to say it to for the issue you're focusing on. 5calls.org specifically gives you background information, a template, and numbers to call: you can select an issue on the home page or search one up.

You can make a difference on a civil level. I see a ton of people saying that it's worthless to try; that's how dumb bills pass. Call someone and complain.

MUSIC FOR A BIRTHDAY



(for leilana)

1. black sheep - metric
2. scott pilgrim - plumtree

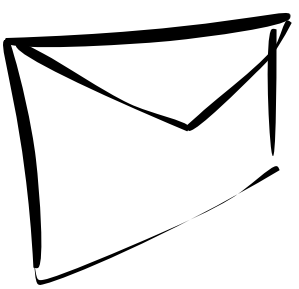
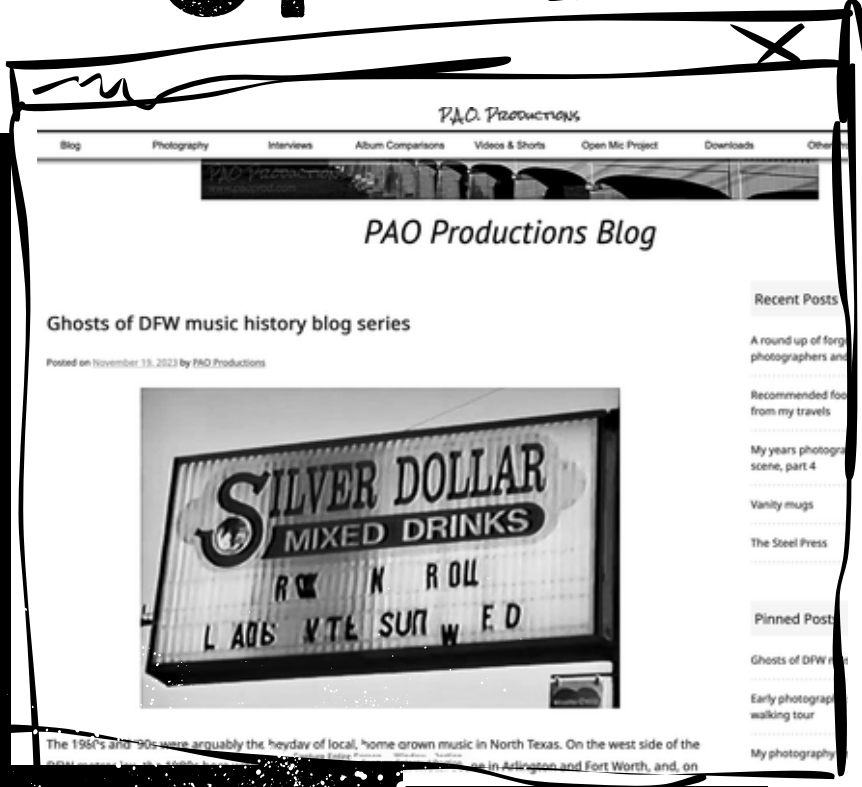
4. & 4. i eat salads now - sidney gish
5. lover girl - laufey
6. heaven beside you - alice in chains

YOU'VE GOT MAIL!

Hate reading things online? Me too! Great thing is, we've got something called USPS. Should you like Nice Tunes, Man enough to read it each month, shoot me an email at nicetunesman@gmail.com asking about zine delivery!



ghosts of DFW



I like knowing the history of where I live --- I delight to see a plaque next to a big, old building. Music has been a big part of my life; you can imagine my excitement when I found a blog series entirely dedicated to DFW's music history.

paoprod.com is a collection of photography, journals, interviews and projects from Dallasite Peter Orozco. His series 'Ghosts of DFW Music History' documents his journey finding old, prominent venues which have since closed down. Orozco recounts a history of metal clubs, bars, and record stores supplemented by archived newspapers and flyers. While it's unfinished, it's certainly a good read and an interesting look into DFW in the 80's.

NICE TUNES MAN

Nice Tunes, Man is a monthly zine based in the DFW metroplex dedicated to all punk, rock-and-roll, artsy, activist goings-on of our scene. It's a conglomeration of mixes, photography, and writing which ANYONE can contribute to - if you have anything music related to say, any cool photos, any art that you'd like featured in the next edition, contact me at nicetunesman@gmail.com.

contact us (ME!) at nicetunesman@gmail.com

Special thanks go to Nat, Leilana, Rocco, Riley, my sister and my parents for all the coolness they supply. I am a big proponent of print media - I'm not one to read books or news online. However, if you missed the last edition, digital copies are available on the internet archive (archive.org): just search up 'Nice Tunes, Man'.
